University of Virginia.

[Reported for the Disparch.] UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA, TUESDAY, June 26, 1877. Hot day, and plenty of it, but no lack of interest in the celebrations. That nice piece of road between Charlottesville and the University is recovering from the rain of Sunday and getting back to dust.

In visiting around among the students to-day I saw some curious things. I learned that there were a great many invalids. I dropped in on a friend on the East lawn. He was lying on his bed fanning himself. "By the way," said my friend, "I am not very well, and my physician has ordered me to take a little whiskey, and this is about the time to take it." The bottle was gotten out and the physician's directions obeyed. I dropped in to see another friend on West lawn. After the compliments of the day, he informed me that he had been suffering from cramp-colic for some days, and the doctor had given him some stuff to take, and strange-but this was the hour for taking. He took.

Passing along I met another old triend, and he invited me to his room. He complained of a disorder of the stomach, and this was his hour for taking medicine. He also took. Hearing that a friend was rooming on East range, I went down and found him with a couple of neighbors, taking life easy. Strange as it may appear, these gentlemen also took some medicine.

But do not understand that it is a rule for the boys to be sick always. For time months they have toiled and toiled day and night, never resting enough; and now that school is out all are merry, for the long-needed rest is at hand. Society in celebrating its tinal—at least I ing, W. F. Taylor, J. C. Shelton, J. C. think it is called the "final."

Jones, J. C. Terrell, E. Alexander, J. W. think it is called the "final"

Before dark all kinds of vehicles commenced bringing loads of passengers, and B. B. Mitchell, D. Tuckwiller, W. F. Saunby 8 o'clock the hall was well filled. The young gentlemen assigned for duty did the nior: G. R. Hughes, J. L. Armstrong, H. work well in providing seats for the audience. But let us get on with our pregramme.

Music by the band, and a long line of professors visitors, committeemen, officers, and speakers, marched into the bail and ocfollowed by prayer by Mr. McBryde, the chaplain. I observed that the presiding officer of the "Jeff." is the son of a Richmond lady. And, by the way, the final president of each society this year lives in and hails from Albemarle county. Enough glory for one State, one county,

MR. CHARLES A. CULBERSON, OF TEXAS, the orator of the evening. The theme of the orator was "Causes of the French Revolution." He argued that the popular idea of the revolution was erroneous. The revolution was a change of government, of principles, of ideas. This change, the re-sult of growth of political knowledge, discontent of the people in their subjugation, progress of commerce, character of literature, the influence of the struggles of other nations-as America, Poland, Ireland, and the Dutch provinces.

He next discussed the condition of France-the oppression of feudal usages. encroachments of the Crown, the National Legislature abolished virtually, the whole machinery of the Government vested in the Crown by desperate usurpation, the no-bility and clergy holding the lands of the nation and exempt from taxation, the possessions of the clergy inalienable and thus removed from the channels of trade, the its review of new publications. That is whole burden of the Government on the middle and lower classes, the oppression of the lower classes by the proud and haughty nobles. Thus this ancient despotism gave no scope to political life, no guarantee of rational freedom. The incessant warfare of Louis XIV., extravagance of the regency and Louis XV., produced bankruptcy and heavier taxation.

But the real prevailing fashion which united the masses was the RIGHTS OF MEN.

The failure of the French at this point was their failure to appreciate and recognize their responsibility to God.

between the American and French revolutions. The true God of the one and the painted Grisette of the other. He closed with the appeal that the example of this revolution might be cherished for its splendid achievements; the abolition of feudal tenure: the extinction of heardings with the extinction of the three-masted schooner Osprey, which sailed from New York February, 1854, for San Francisco; that some time in April or May following they picked up five men in a boat off the coast of Brazil, one of whom was an Englishman, and was called "Tick"; The speaker here drew a strong contrast tenure; the extinction of hereditary titles; thought it was a nickname; considered bling of crown pride and arrogance; assertion and maintenance of individual and color French accent, and said his father was a lective manhood, and the erecting of repub- lord or something of that sort, and that he lican institutions on the ruins of

Mr. Soutball, the president of the Society, then made the presentation speech of the Society medal to the best debater of this session. His remarks were short and to the point, and in presenting the medal to Mr. Stuart, felt satisfied that the Jefferson Society would never regret the selection of me-Mr. A. G. Stuart, of Staunton, Va., is the dalist this session.

son of Hon. A. H. H. Stuart. He is a mere youth in appearance, easy, graceful, and has a fine, rich voice, which will yet be heard beyond the walls of the public hall of the University.

Mr. Stuart returned thanks for the medal. Reminded the Society of some of its members who were great. In literature, Mosely in religion, Broadus and Dudley. He then referred to the way in which the people of hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of the South are living on the reputation of head." the dead, while the people of the North are advancing. He appealed to his fellow-students to make names for themselves, and closed his little speech by saying: "And now, surrounded by philosophers and scholars, by statesmen and orators, by the beauty and chivalry of the South; I must not detain you longer; for inexperience should not advise experience, nor should youth speak where wisdom holds her peace."

Sitting near where stood the young orator was his venerable father, Hon. A. H. H. Stuart. Though bowed with age and toil I thought I could see his eye glisten with the fire of youth as he listened to his boy, who will possibly take the place of the father in the love and affection of the people of Virginia.

The band played, the audience was thanked for attention and attendance, and then the young and the gay, with a considerable sprinkling of those who would like to be young and gay, followed the band to the lawn to walk and talk, talk and walk, and be bright and merry under the soft light of R. THE TICHBORNE CASE-AN OSPREY WIT-NESS TURNS UP IN THE CALIFORNIA PENITEN-TIARY.-San Francisco, June 25.-A short time ago the Call published news relative to the schooner Osprey, said to have picked up the Tichborne claimant off the Brazilian coast. The article was read by an old man named Oliver Perry, now a prisoner in the penitentiary of this State, who made a statement, which is published in the Call of Sunday morning, to the effect that he was second mate and carpenter of the threesecularization of church property; hum- him an overgrown boy about twenty years had been in South America travelling for pleasure. The Osprey, after coming to this port, went to Australia, and he supposed that Tick went on her, but is not certain. reader see that Mr. Culberson is worthy of | The captain's name was Owen. Perry is now over seventy years of age. His remembrance of the circumstances came to him by degrees in the course of conversation. He knew little of Tichborne, having been in the more unsettled portions of the Pacific coast for the past fifteen or twenty years. He says he met Captain Owen afterwards at Idaho City in 1873 or 1874. Parties who have known Perry say he was always considered a reliable man, and got into the penitentiary more through misfortune and whiskey than dishonesty. Accounts from Buenos Ayres tell of a series of almost unprecedented rain-storms, extending over a period of several weeks, which have caused widespread disasters in that province. The damage to and on the farms is described as having been immense, and Poe; in politics, Bailey and Toombs; while the "losses of cattle, horses, and sheep can only be estimated, amounting to
